WHICH

Red or White? When your blood is full of bright red corpuscles you don't need a tonic or any other medicine—just good food, fresh air and exercise.

But when your blood is full of white corpuscles and they make you pale and weak, then you need a remedy to displace that excess of white corpuscles with red ones, which in turn will build up your blood and then your body and give you health and strength, and for this purpose we don't know of any preparation which is equal to our famous

Bosworth, national roque champion

Won by Defeating Williams in a Hard Game—Grounds in Use Until Long After Midnight Trying to Decide Three Corned Tie for Second Place—Whitaker Wins Second Van Wickle Badge—Kirk Wins Out in the Second Division with Steele Second.

Occasionally the national roque tournament has unfinished games at the end of the tournament week which are played off the first of the next day for money. This was done in the tournament gone beyond Monday as it has this year. It was impossible to complete all the games necessary to decide the tie which was divided on Monday so that play continued through the night and until after 2:30 o'clock this morning. This was done to allow Williams who was in the three-cornered tie for second place with E. Clark and Rudd, to play the tie off, as he was obliged to get away today and be left on the Bar Harbor express at three o'clock this morning.

Not until Monday afternoon was the national championship decided and then it was won by Harold Bosworth of New London, who defeated Williams in a hard fight. It was a tight contest and Bosworth, who was champion in 1907, won out amidst the plaudits of the crowd. Harold Bosworth beat Williams in the first round, 11 to 10, and in the second round, 11 to 10, and in the third round, 11 to 10, and in the fourth round, 11 to 10, and in the fifth round, 11 to 10,
